

Generally, there are three main sections within a well written essay: introduction, body, and conclusion. Each section has different goals, and should be personalized to the specific style, audience, and topic that you are writing about/for. Good organization is important because it helps your reader follow your points easily.

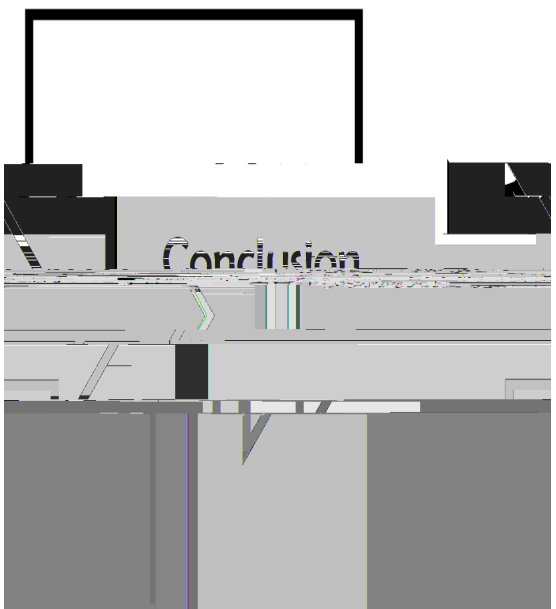

The introduction of your essay begins with an attention getter before introducing the topic and main ideas of your paper. An attention getter captures the audience's attention and makes the reader want to

Main Point 1:

Provides a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph. It begins with a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph. It provides supporting details that explain and develop the main point. It concludes with a concluding sentence that summarizes the main point.

- Begins with a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph.
- Provides supporting details that explain and develop the main point.
- Concludes with a concluding sentence that summarizes the main point.

Main Point 2:

Provides a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph. It begins with a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph. It provides supporting details that explain and develop the main point. It concludes with a concluding sentence that summarizes the main point.

- Begins with a topic sentence that states the main point of the paragraph.
- Provides supporting details that explain and develop the main point.
- Concludes with a concluding sentence that summarizes the main point.

For more detailed help or if you have questions, visit the Writing Center located in the Lewis University Library or call 815-836-5427.